Note on the Editor's Change of Address

For approximately the past month, the editor has been in Washington on a temporary basis and it has now been learned that this will become permanent. This means that for several months, the Bulletin can only be turned out on an uncertain basis and correspondence will also be irregular. Reference material is not presently available so it will be difficult to answer questions. The address given above is a temporary one and will be replaced within the next two months. The inconvenience is regretted but it cannot be escaped until someone else can be found to do the work or until the Club has grown sufficiently to justify turning the job over to a commercial concern.

In connection with the projected special issue of Linn's, one of the writers is curious about the earliest known use of U.S. perfins. The earliest cover thus far reported to the editor is dated June 10, 1909 and, if you have an earlier one, a report on a postcard would be appreciated.
